Eugene O'Neill (1888–1953)
Playwright

In 1851 six-year-old James O'Neill, father of Eugene, emigrated from New Ross with his family on board the India, a sister ship of the Dunbrody.
The playwright's Long Day's Journey into Night draws on his family's Irish experience.
In 1936 he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature.
